Background

SCOPE AND CONTENT:

The Stew Albert and Judy Gumbo Albert Papers offer insight into the lives of two activists who were involved in anti-Vietnam war protests, members of the Youth International Party (Yippies), and had ties to groups such as the Black Panther Party and the Weather Underground. This collection contains a variety of materials, including manuscripts, FBI files and court documents, photographs, slides, and negatives, artwork, audiovisual material, realia, scrapbooks, and posters. Besides documenting their lives and activities, the collection also offers a glimpse into an aspect of American activism in the 1960s and afterwards, including antiwar protests and the women's liberation movement. The Alberts had close ties to other prominent figures in the movement, such as Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin, who are well-represented in this collection through writings, correspondence, photographs, and audio interviews.

With roughly 28 linear feet of materials, the Stew Albert and Judy Gumbo Albert papers are divided into 12 series: Manuscripts and Writings; Name and Correspondence; Personal; Topical Files; FBI Files; Court Documents; Photographs, Slides, and Negatives; Artwork; Audiovisual; Realia; Scrapbooks; and Posters. Researchers should note that books have been separated from the collection and cataloged individually.

BIOGRAPHICAL / HISTORICAL:

Stew Albert, a founding member of the Yippies, was a political activist, writer, journalist, and unindicted co-conspirator in the "Chicago Seven" case in 1968. Born in Brooklyn in 1939, he went to Cuba in 1960 with a friend. On the plane on the way there, he met and conversed with C. Wright Mills. He graduated from Pace University with a major in politics and philosophy and worked for the City of New York welfare department as a case worker. In 1965, he bought a bus ticket to San Francisco, where he visited City Lights Bookstore and met poet Allen Ginsberg. Moving to Berkeley, he began volunteering for the antiwar Vietnam Day Committee, where he met Jerry Rubin, Tom Hayden, and other social activists. A friend of Abbie Hoffman, Stew Albert participated in some of his well-publicized stunts, such as showering the New York Stock Exchange with $1 bills and attempting to exorcize the Pentagon.

In 1967, Stew Albert was a founding member of the Youth International Party, or Yippies. Other founding members included Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin, and Paul Krassner. The Yippies were known for their use of political theater to protest the Vietnam war. They organized a "Festival of Life" for the 1968 Democratic National convention in Chicago, but were denied permits to hold the festival in Lincoln Park, where they had planned to gather. Stew and other Yippie members ran a counter-presidential campaign with their chosen candidate, an actual pig named Pigasus. Over the course of the week, violence escalated as the Chicago police attempted to drive the demonstrators out of Lincoln Park. In the ensuing violence, Stew Albert was clubbed in the head by police. He also covered the convention as a correspondent for the Berkeley Barb, an underground newspaper based in Berkeley. In the trial of the "Chicago Eight" (later the Chicago Seven), Stew Albert was listed as an unindicted co-conspirator for his role in the demonstrations.

1968 was also the year Stew Albert met Judy Clavir (formerly Hemblen), a fellow activist. She was nicknamed Judy Gumbo by Eldridge Cleaver, a close friend of Stew, and the name stuck. Born in Canada, she was involved with the Yippies, Women's International Terrorist Conspiracy from Hell (W.I.T.C.H.), and the women's liberation movement. In 1971, she traveled to Vietnam with Nancy Kurshan, also a Yippie, and Jeannie Plamondon, who had ties to the White Panthers, to talk with the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Viet Nam.

In 1969, Stew Albert played a role in the creation of the People's Park in Berkeley in 1969, and the resulting protests. His involvement landed him in Alameda County Jail for two months, and he subsequently ran for sheriff of Alameda County. He lost, but received 65,000 votes and carried the city of Berkeley. He also helped to found the Free University in Berkeley.

Through his friendships with Black Panther members Eldridge Cleaver and Bobby Seale, Stew Albert served as a liaison between the Black Panther Party and the Yippies. In 1970, when Timothy Leary, the LSD advocate, had escaped from prison, Stew Albert escorted him to Algeria to introduce him to Eldridge Cleaver, who was living in exile there.

After the Weather Underground bombed the U.S. Capitol in 1971 to protest the Vietnam War, the Alberts held a press conference and Judy Gumbo Albert declared, "We didn't do it, but we dug it." In 1972, Stew Albert and Judy Gumbo took part in protests at the Republican National Convention in Miami. He also enlisted John Lennon and Yoko Ono in a "Beatle/Yippie pact" that nearly resulted in Lennon's deportation.

After finding a homing device on their car, Stew and Judy filed suit against the FBI in 1975 for illegal surveillance. They discovered that the FBI had been monitoring them and searching their cabin in the Catskills, and won a $20,000 settlement. Stew Albert later became a private investigator, and helped others obtain government files kept on them through the Freedom of Information Act.

Stew Albert and Judy Gumbo Albert married in 1977. They had one daughter, Jessica Albert. Moving to Portland, Oregon, in 1984, they continued to be active in various causes. Judy Albert worked with Planned Parenthood, and Stew Albert was involved with the Oregon Jewish Agenda, the New Jewish Agenda, and Israel peace activism. They co-edited The Sixties Papers, a document-based history of the era that was published in 1984. Stew Albert also wrote a 2004 memoir, Who the Hell is Stew Albert?, which reflected upon his lifetime of involvement in various causes. In 2000, Stew Albert was a consultant to the film maker Robert Greenwald for the film Steal This Movie, based on the book Steal This Book by Abbie Hoffman. He ran a website, the Yippie Reading Room, and kept a weblog from 2002 until his death from liver cancer in 2006. Two days before his death, he posted, "My politics have not changed."

Manuscripts and Writings (Series)

The Manuscripts and Writings series (5 linear feet) is divided into seven subseries distinguished by authorship and document type. The series consists of notes, published and unpublished works of poetry and prose, and supporting materials. Stew and Judy Albert authored manuscripts individually, as co-authors, and as collaborators with others. The bulk of the documentation describes the countercultural movements and significant people of the 1960s-70s, much of it contained within the autobiographical poetry and prose of Stew Albert. More recent writings, in the form of weblog postings by Stew Albert, also make up a considerable portion of the series.

The Photographs, Slides, and Negatives series (1 linear foot plus oversize materials) documents the activities of Stew and Judy Albert from the late 1960s through 2006. This series is arranged in approximate chronological order. Early photographs, many by other photographers, depict a variety of protests in Berkeley, San Francisco, and Miami, as well as other subjects such as the Berkeley Barb newspaper offices, the Black Panthers, and the Yippies. Some of these photographs were reprinted in The Sixties Papers. The series also contains photographs from travel to Russia and Czechoslovakia in the early 1970s. Judy Albert traveled to Vietnam on an all-women's trip in 1971, and her photographs from that trip include prints, contact sheets, slides, and negatives. The Vietnam photographs are vivid images of people and places in Vietnam, including landscapes, street scenes, river scenes, villages, children, people working in fields, Vietnamese fighters, and wreckage from downed American planes. Judy appears to have had a particular interest in Vietnamese women soldiers, who are represented in the photographs, artwork, and realia from her trip. Another group of Vietnam pictures, apparently by another photographer, documents a variety of war-related scenes from 1968-1971. Many of the later photographs are from reunions of the Yippies and other activists. Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin, and Bobby Seale appear in multiple photographs. The movie set and Portland, Oregon premier of Steal This Movie (1999-2000) are also well-documented.

Audiovisual (Series)

The Audiovisual series (5.5 linear feet) has been divided by format into Audiocassettes, Reformatted CDs, Compact Discs, Digital Videocassettes, DVDs, Videocassettes, and LPs. The series largely consists of interviews in a variety of formats, with additional material including home movies, documentaries, and other miscellaneous content.

The Audiocassettes subseries contains 149 tapes, most of which are interviews with friends of Stew and Judy Albert. Other content includes music, radio programs, and unidentified material. The tapes have been individually numbered and filed in roughly alphabetical order by title or individual's last name. The original labels have been used as headings, with approximations where spellings are uncertain. Some tapes have different content on each side, and the same names may be listed on multiple tapes throughout the inventory. Audiocassettes 1-70 have been reformatted onto compact discs (except for 23 and 69).

The Compact Discs subseries include four music CDs and a recording of a radio show. The three Digital Videocassettes are interviews on the set of Steal This Movie with Anita Hoffman, Stew and Judy Albert, Ingrid Veninger, and Donal Logue. The twelve DVDs include interviews with Stew and Judy Albert, home movies, remembrances of Stew Albert, and several documentaries.

The Videocassettes subseries contains 44 VHS tapes of home movies, documentaries, television programs, and interviews. They have been individually numbered and filed in alphabetical order. Six of the videocassettes are cast interviews, clips, and previews related to the motion picture Steal This Movie, a biographical film about the life of Abbie Hoffman. The series also contains the movie itself, in both VHS and DVD format. Documentaries cover the Weather Underground, the Yippies, and various 1960s-related topics.

The four LPs include a recording of Eldridge Cleaver's "Soul on Wax," "The Wedding of Judith and David Hemblen," and two untitled records, possibly self-recorded.

Realia (Series)

The Realia series (2 linear feet plus 1 oversize box) has been divided into four subseries: T-Shirts, Hats, Other Textiles, and Artifacts. The T-Shirts subseries contains 38 t-shirts with slogans and logos representing various political causes, ranging from the 1960s to 2000. The Hats subseries contains a reversible beret with a Che Guevara decal and two baseball caps. Other Textiles include a woven blanket, a black silk shirt and pants, an embroidered shirt, and two Vietnamese silk scarves.

The Artifacts subseries contains gifts from friends, two license plates, items from Vietnam, and other miscellany. The artifacts from Vietnam are related to Judy Albert's trip there in 1971, also documented in the writings and photographs series. These items include a bracelet, ring, and flat sculpture made out of metal from downed American planes, and a painted wooden plate depicting a Vietnamese woman soldier in a boat. In addition, the collection contains a fragment of a steel pellet bomblet (a photograph of which can be found with other Vietnam photographs in the photograph series). 123 buttons and label pins have been transferred to the Labadie button collection.
